High-Density, Compact Mobile Shelving

Want to know one of the storage solutions we get pretty excited about? High-density mobile shelving, or simply, shelves that move. Mobile shelving gives you a significantly greater storage capacity per square foot of floor space than conventional storage products like lateral files or static shelving. In many applications, these systems are three times more space-efficient than conventional filing and shelving. In short? It can help you get rid of wasted space, increase revenue, and increase storage of the items that are most important to your business.

8,000 Boxes in A 16-foot-wide building

Mobile High-Bay storage system sets the standard for best-in-class compact archival storage technology

When square footage is at a premium, XTend Mobile High-Bay allows you to fully maximize your floor space and double the storage capacity as compared to that of conventional high-bay archival shelving. This means doubled storage capacity or potentially smaller building footprints. Smaller facilities require less energy to operate and maintain.

Most books, bound journals or other paper archival collections absorb moisture like sponges and must be stored in humidity and temperature controlled warehouse facilities to avoid damage or degradation. The costs to keep and operate these buildings can be extensive, and the bigger the warehouse, the larger the costs. Using an XTend Mobile High-Bay system keeps your building footprint smaller. Less aisles are required for access and so, less floor space is used.
